

Dear Investor,

Highly Effective Credit

If you don't know your current credit score, you should. In today's market, having access to credit is a must. For new immigrants and those with limited credit histories, purchasing a new home, accessing unsecured credit, and finding low-interest cards and car loans can be difficult indeed. For those with damaged credit and bankruptcies, getting even limited credit can seem impossible, and constant phone calls from creditors can make the situation seem even more hopeless. Building wealth is impossible without credit, and true financial freedom will remain an unattainable dream.

Fortunately, there are things you can do to improve your credit score and your situation in life. Credit scores are not set in stone, and building credit is not a mysterious process. It's simply a matter of learning what works and then applying these strategies over time. Obviously, paying your bills on time and using credit responsibly will help your credit score. However, there are numerous other, highly effective ways to build credit that most people simply aren't aware of. Knowing which types of accounts to open or close, learning how to delete errors from your credit report that may be having a negative impact on your score, and finding out how many credit lines and cards you should have can all allow you to boost your credit score fast.

High Credit Score

There are many benefits to building credit and maintaining a high score. When you have a great score, creditors view you as a lower risk borrower. This allows you not only to access the funds you need to purchase a new home, boat, or car, but also lets you get those loans at manageable interest rates so you can pay them back sooner and keep more money in your pocket. Just a percent or two can save you years of payments.

Attaining an impeccable credit score is also an essential first step in building wealth. With it, you'll be able to access hundreds of thousands of dollars in unsecured credit, funds you can use to start one or more businesses or invest in real estate. This is the best way to make your money work for you and generate positive cash flow. Over time, many people are able to generate thousands of dollars in extra income each and every month.
